WEEK 63 of #ClimateStrike at the @UN! Today I'm @solo_not_alone and thinking about the world we live in. The planet is dying and people just go about their business inside an unsustainable system. I'm just watching them go by.
When will everyone wake up?

It is really sad to know that these guys knew the damage that they were causing to our planet.

It is really sad to know that they knew the effects of their actions.

They have watched lives get destroyed but still continued.

And even now! Its SAD!

HS2 will destroy or irreparably damage five internationally protected wildlife sites, 693 local wildlife sites, 108 ancient woodlands and 33 legally protected sites of special scientific interest, according to the most comprehensive survey of its impact on wildlife.

Swaths of other irreplaceable natural habitat will be lost to the new high-speed line, with endangered wildlife such as willow tit, white-clawed crayfish and dingy skipper butterfly at risk of local extinction.

The study, drawn from data provided by 14 local Wildlife Trusts and other charities and landowners along the route including the National Trust and the Woodland Trust, says HS2 will also cut through 26 large landscape-scale conservation efforts and damage other wildlife-rich habitats including wetlands, veteran trees, wildflower meadows and historic wood pasture.

HS2 could threaten the future of numerous internationally and legally protected natural habitats

On campaign stops I ask for a show of hands if someone's heard young people say they're not gonna have kids cuz they don't see how they can make it happen given the economy, environment etc. Several always do. Such hopelessness should not exist in the richest country in the world

Since the beginning of climate strikes we see white organizers being prioritized and dominating the conversation. The fact that it took the explicit exclusion of a black organizer for the public to see the visible erasure is disappointing. Uplift POC climate organizers always.

Similarly, only 0.8% BAME representation nationally on senior boards managing natural landscapes, reflected too in the workforce. Urgent change is needed. If you are qualified, apply by March 6 for a NPA/AONB Secretary of State position! @uknationalparks @Campaign4Parks 1/

The fact that there has been a drive for diversity and yet the retention rate for Black academics is so low, highlights the need for more focus on equity and inclusion

At @chesterzoo we believe that conservation action should be at the ❤️ of our #education system. Young people deserve opportunities to have their voices heard on environmental issues. #Conservation action can be supported in school as part of a balanced approach to education.

“ I worry that people don't recognise how valuable their individual actions are in sparking change. Planting wildflowers, drilling a few holes in bricks, being a bit 'lazier' in the garden, can encourage so much wildlife to your doorstep – it couldn't be easier!”
SOPHIE PAVELLE, 24

Thanks to the dedication of schoolchildren and volunteers in the City, wildflower meadows and roof gardens have been created, allowing pollinators, including many butterflies, to thrive in central London. This shows the potential we all have to protect nature, in every place, even in our concrete jungles.”

KABIR KAUL, 14

“ My favourite thing about nature is its unmistakable diversity. I am reminded of the woods by the captivating scents of wildflowers; majestic colours of birds soaring high, and simply the soothing symphony of birdsong.”
PRINCESS-JOY EMEANUWA, 17
